

married for almost 53 years, and they shared everything.

When Jay came back from the service, he went to Brooklyn Law School. In order to get by, they needed family support, and Jay clerked for his Uncle Julie and also worked at night in order to bring in some money. Soon Hollie was born, and Jay studied for the bar while Randy tried to keep her quiet.

In 1958, the family moved to Washington, DC, where Perri was born. Jay went to work for Granik & Marshall, a lobbying law firm that dealt often with public television, and Jay became especially interested in the production end of things. He worked there for ten years, but then Jay went to work for Senator Jacob Javitz of New York on Capitol Hill.

Jay loved working on the Hill. He loved writing legislation and being a part of the process. He was also unusual. He was not only competent but helpful and friendly when many other people were not. A plaque in his office read, "Mirthful Jay Cutler." Hollie was especially proud when people at work would meet her and say, "You're Jay Cutler's daughter?" And even though he was extremely modest, Jay accomplished a great deal. He would never put on airs or boast, but he was extremely good at getting people together and getting things done. A book that was written at the time called The Dance of Legislation which followed the development of the National Health Service Corps, and it featured Jay as one of its subjects. It became clear with regards to this major legislation that a great deal would not have happened if it weren't for Jay.

After working on Capitol Hill for ten years, Jay went to work as a lobbyist for the American Psychiatric Association. He worked for them for some 25 years, and he made a name for himself as not only a professional but as a mentor to others. He was well-respected and well-liked, and it might not be an exaggeration to say that he mentored half of the health lobbyists working on Capitol Hill today. Jay and Randy also did a tremendous amount of traveling, going all over the world on numerous trips. It was part of their life together to go to new places. He retired just last year and was looking forward to doing more consulting.

Upon his retirement, the Congressional Record, entered on April 30, 2003 by Senator Kennedy, praises Jay for his work. It explains that Jay was part and parcel of legislation having to do with mental illness reform and substance abuse treatment, and he believed passionately in improving the government's policies, alleviating suffering, and removing the stigma that mental illness can often bring. It also makes sure to mention Randy, his ever-present companion and support. Jay was, after all, first and foremost a family man. And all know him for the giving soul that he was. He was very generous, and gave of himself and his time freely.

As a father, Jay was always incredibly loving and playful with Hollie and Perri. He could make any child smile, laugh, and play. And he was not above stealing the chocolate frosting off of someone's plate if you left the table or pouring sugar into ashttrays at restaurants and setting them on fire. His children remember how much he loved the beach and could be found there from ten in the morning until sunset, and he would have been there earlier if he didn't like sleeping in while on vacation. He always seemed to have a permanent tan.

Jay was always there for his children, present but not intrusive, and was always positive and upbeat. Hollie knows what a special father she had, and she, too, went to law school. And Perri especially remembers her trip to King's Dominion with him and how he went on the rides with her even though he was somewhat horrified at the thought. And for the whole family, for Randy's siblings and their partners, Zelda and Arthur, Louis and Barbara, for his nieces and nephews: Sherry, Bonnie, Scott, Darrell, and Craig, and to his son-in-law Eric, bringing Rachael into his life, Jay was a source of happiness and strength.

But the center of his life was his love for his granddaughter, Mikayla. Jay's sun rose and set on this beautiful little girl who would lovingly call him "Ga." He would do anything for her, and to her, he was one big, lovable toy. Only she was allowed to mess up his hair, and only she could bring him to entirely new levels of joy. His love and his life will have an impact on her far into the future.

Someone once wrote that life and death are not in our hands. Just as we do not choose to be born, so we do not choose to die. Jay's death is profoundly unfair. But he leaves a legacy of love and life that is hard to beat. He would have us smiling. His soul is certainly one of God's lights. Zichrono livracha. Jay's memory will always be a blessing.

LOSS OF FEDERAL AGENT DAVID WILHELM

Mrs. DOLE. Mr. President, tragedy struck Atlanta, GA this past Friday, March 11, 2005. A quiet day in a county courthouse turned into a horrific shooting spree that took the lives of four innocent people throughout the Georgia capital. Among those who fell victim that day was U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement Assistant Special Agent-in-Charge David Wilhelm, who was shot and killed while working to finish his Atlanta home. Friday's heartbreak touches everyone in this country, and is sincerely felt in my hometown of Salisbury, NC, which Special Agent David Wilhelm also called home.

David Wilhelm is remembered as a true patriot, whose commitment to hard work, justice, and the enforcement of the law were admired by all who knew him. After graduating from West Rowan High School in 1982, Special Agent Wilhelm earned a criminal justice degree at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. He began his Federal service as a U.S. Customs Agent in June 1987, in Beaufort, SC, and also served in Charlotte, NC and Norfolk, VA before relocating to Atlanta, GA last November. In Atlanta, he was second in command, managing the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement investigations involving financial crimes, narcotics smuggling, human smuggling, and customs violations. His law enforcement colleagues knew him to be tenacious professionally and a superb team-builder with ace investigative skills and a generous spirit.

David Wilhelm's 18-year commitment to Federal service is most commendable. He spent 16 years with the U.S. Customs Service and 2 years with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. In 2001, he was recognized for his dedication and was awarded the prestigious U.S. Customs Service Blue Eagle Award for work on an important narcotics smuggling case resulting in the seizure of approximately two tons of marijuana and $2.4 million in cash. The Blue Eagle Award is bestowed annually for significant work that goes beyond the expected daily duties.

I have immense respect for the many Federal law enforcement agents who risk their lives daily to protect Americans. I am truly saddened by the loss of David Wilhelm, and my thoughts and prayers are certainly with his wife Candee, his brother Patrick, who serves as an Immigration and Customs Enforcement Agent in Atlanta, GA, and all his family and friends. May Special Agent David Wilhelm's dedication, sense of duty and honor never be forgotten. In addition, I would like to send my sincere condolences to the families, friends, and co-workers of the other three victims of Friday's violence, Judge Rowland Barnes, court reporter Julie Ann Brandau, and Sergeant Hoyt Teasley of the Fulton County Sheriff's Department.

RETIREMENT OF CAROLE GEAGLEY

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, at the end of March, 2005, Carole Geagley is retiring from the U.S. Senate, and I rise today to pay her tribute.

Carole began her Capitol Hill career in 1977 when she began working for the Joint Economic Committee, where she rose to the position of personal assistant to the executive director. Before that Carole was the office manager at the law firm of Seltzer and Suskind, from 1971 to 1977.

In 1990 she joined the Senate Appropriations Committee staff. At first Carole worked for the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, and Related Agencies. She then made the move to Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies. As the Senate majority changed over the years she worked for both Senator HARKIN and myself, helping manage the seamless transition between chairmanships for more than 15 years. As office administrator Carole has toiled behind the scenes to efficiently prepare many hearings this subcommittee has conducted. She has done everything from letters of invitation to witnesses, preparing background information for hearing books, creating data tables, and maintaining Member requests from Members of the Senate. For the professionalism of her work, she will be missed.

Yet it is for Carole's many other attributes that we will miss her the most. The youngest of four siblings, Carole's cheerful disposition, effervescent personality, and her famous cakes have made her the Perle Mesta of the Appropriations Committee. Her cakes and pies are so well known that TOM HARKIN, who is quite the chef himself, has asked for her recipes—especially her Coca-Cola cake. It should also be noted that her award-winning cheesecake is featured at a well-known restaurant in her home State of Maryland.

Carole has many other talents as well. She and her husband, Ron, are championship bridge players and have played in many national tournaments. In fact, that is how she met Ron, at a bridge tournament in 1975. They were married in 1977 and raised a beautiful daughter, Lori. They are now blessed with three grandchildren who we can all hope will inherit their grandmother's knack at cooking. My best wishes to Carole and her family on this occasion of her retirement.

Mr. HARKIN. I join my colleague in thanking Carole Geagley for her service to the U.S. Senate and wishing her well as she embarks in a new phase of her life.

Carole is an institution on the Appropriations Committee and not one that will soon be forgotten. She spent the longest period of her Appropriations life assisting the group of offices that staff call "the Bullpen," a crowded space in the Hart Building that holds anywhere from five to seven subcommittee staffs. With different bills moving at different paces through the Senate, that area is often the locus for much activity, and Carole managed those interactions with a calm demeanor.

In that capacity, Carole came into contact with many Senators and many Senate offices. She is a storehouse of institutional knowledge, which she imparted to younger staffers when perspective and history needed to be their guides. And just as importantly, she fed them. Every staff birthday was celebrated with a Carole Geagley creation. One thing is certain: Appropriations Committee staff will never eat as well as they did when they worked with Carole.

I know that Carole will treat retirement with the same gusto with which she performed her various duties in the Senate. So today we congratulate Carole. We thank her for her longtime service to this institution and we wish the whole Geagley family the best.

TRIBUTE TO A GREAT NEW MEXICAN: J. PAUL TAYLOR

• Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to come to the floor today to express my gratitude to J. Paul Taylor—a man of great passion for his wife and children, art and culture, education, border health, progressive politics, and last but definitely not least, improving the economic, social, and spiritual well-being of the people in the Mesilla Valley in southern New Mexico.

J. Paul Taylor has touched the lives of so many of the people throughout our great State of New Mexico, but what is most remarkable is that he has done so in so many different facets of life. News articles about him have never really captured but one small piece of his life, as they focus on: J. Paul Taylor: The Artist; J. Paul Taylor: The Historian; J. Paul Taylor: The Educator; J. Paul Taylor: The Politician; J. Paul Taylor: The Father of Border Health; J. Paul Taylor: The Advocate for the Poor; J. Paul Taylor: Children's Advocate.

Only J. Paul Taylor could be honored in the wide array of ways he has, including having New Mexico State University establish the J. Paul Taylor Endowment in the College of Education, the New Mexico Human Needs Coordinating Council establishing the J. Paul Taylor Legislative Champion Award to honor other legislators, the New Mexico Library Association naming him a "New Mexico Library Treasure," getting the Lifetime Achievement Award with his wife from the New Mexico Historic Preservation Division, receiving the Voice for Children Award from the New Mexico Voices for Children, and the awards go on and on.

Representative Taylor was recently honored by his legislative colleagues in the New Mexico Roundhouse, both Democrats and Republicans. As the Las Cruces Sun-News reported, "Taylor was described as 'the great gentleman of New Mexico politics,' and 'a populist advocate for the poor and disenfranchised.' He was also lauded for his effort to create the Office of Childhood Development and for the donation of his home in Mesilla, to be converted into a museum following the death of Taylor and his wife, Mary."

Earlier this month, J. Paul Taylor was unanimously confirmed as a member of the New Mexico National Hispanic Cultural Center and the awards and recognitions just keep on coming.

I am so pleased to have worked closely with J. Paul Taylor for the good of New Mexico and the people of the Mesilla Valley throughout my career and think words are impossible to express my gratitude to him for all that he has done for the people of New Mexico. He embodies the very best of our State—its culture and its heart and soul.●

CONGRATULATING THE UNIVERSITY OF ARKANSAS TRACK AND FIELD PROGRAM

• Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to the University of Arkansas Track and Field Team on earning their 40th NCAA Title last weekend. This win also marks the team's 18th indoor track title, the most of any Division 1 athletic program in the Nation.

Saturday's win continues a long tradition of excellence for a program that boasts some the best attendance at track events nationwide. A crowd of 5,461 faithful fans cheered them on to victory in Fayetteville, AR last Saturday. The success of our talented athletes and coaches is a source of pride for all Arkansans.

Under the leadership of Head Coach John McDonnell, the Razorbacks have been a consistent powerhouse in collegiate athletics, earning him the honors as the Nation's winningest track and field coach. In his 33rd year as head coach, McDonnell has won 74 conference championships, 31-straight cross-country conference titles, and 5 NCAA triple crowns.

In fact, Coach McDonnell's team has won at least one national title in cross country, indoor or outdoor track in 20 of the past 21 years. It is no wonder that he has been named National Coach of the Year a total 27 times for his work with Arkansas athletics. Indeed, his record of success reads like a page out of the Guinness Book of World Records. His ability to recruit and hone the talents of the most outstanding athletes in collegiate track and field rightly identifies him with the greatest names in the history of college sports.

The young men that join the University of Arkansas track squad are models of athletic excellence. Their hard work and dedication to the sport are a source of pride and inspiration for Arkansans and sports fans everywhere. Among them are 156 All-American athletes who have won a total of 585 All-American honors for individual events, and the members of the Arkansas track and field team have earned a remarkable 102 national championships for individual events. In fact, the official web site of Razorback Athletics, www.hogwired.com, boasts that "[track and field] athletes who letter four years are likely to leave with more rings than fingers." Additionally, twenty-five U of A track athletes have gone on to compete in the Olympic Games, the highest honor for an amateur athlete.

I would be remiss if I neglected to mention the essential contribution that the University of Arkansas's Athletic Director, Frank Broyles, makes to the success of the track program. Frank is a steadfast supporter of track and field, and by appointing Coach McDonnell to head the program in 1977 and funding the track program at an optimal level for the many years thereafter, this 40th National Title is a tribute to him and his work to make Arkansas athletics what it is today.
